

An Exclusive Interview with The Parrot By The Elephant

This evening I find myself sitting across from The Parrot in his cozy hole-in-the-tree abode. He has placed a bowl of assorted nuts on the table between us and we crack them to reach the pulp inside. With each crack of a nutshell we can imagine the ice breaking as well, as we delve deep into The Parrot's life.

The Elephant: So Parrot, what do you do for fun around here?

The Parrot: Well Elephant, I like to eat fruit, however that's becoming difficult because most of my free time is now spent keeping greedy girls away from it!

A Picture

TE: Sounds like a bummer. What do you do with the rest of your free time?

TP: I eat fruit. Oh, I also read. I am an avid reader of books. Here is a picture as proof.

TE: You're a veritable intellectual Parrot! What would you say are your biggest strengths?

TP: That's an easy one. Self-composure. I have always been able to put up a good face. Oh, and I play the drums.

TE: You're multi-talented I see, and yes Parrot, I always thought you were as self-composed as a top 40s pop song. Now tell me, what were you doing in this picture?

TP: Oh that thing? I don't quite remember, but it must be a still from one of my many dance performances. I solo at famous concert halls and beach discotheques.

TE: That's fascinating and dripping with what I can only perceive as the sincerest of truths.

TP: Dripping? Like the juice-slop that that silly girl got all over me?!? That's dripping.

This Picture

TE: Yes. Just like the juice slop. Now, tell me about this last picture. If I remember correctly, the whole Tree community went crazy when these photos were released.

TP: Oh yeah. I'm not sure what happened there. One minute I'm a bird and the next that lunatic girl is using me as scissors! The outrage! The nerve of that gruesome girl!! Why I oughta—

TE: Thank you Parrot for your lovely interview, unfortunately we have run out of time and—

TP: Whadda ya mean ran outta time?!? This is a written interview, there's no time limit!! Plus I haven't finished about that ungainly gangly girl who---

TE: Yes!!! Yes! Thank you Parrot. Please refill the assorted nuts, but please include more peanuts this time. Actually, can you just make it assorted peanuts? Thank you. Thank you. Join us next everyone for another exclusive interview with Parrot!

TP: But---

TE: Bye everyone!!!
